How to Write a Descriptive Essay about people?

- Choose a specific person.
- Compile information.
- Make an outline.
- Write the introductory paragraph.
- Write body paragraph.
- Summarize the the essay in the concluding paragraph

Choose a specific person

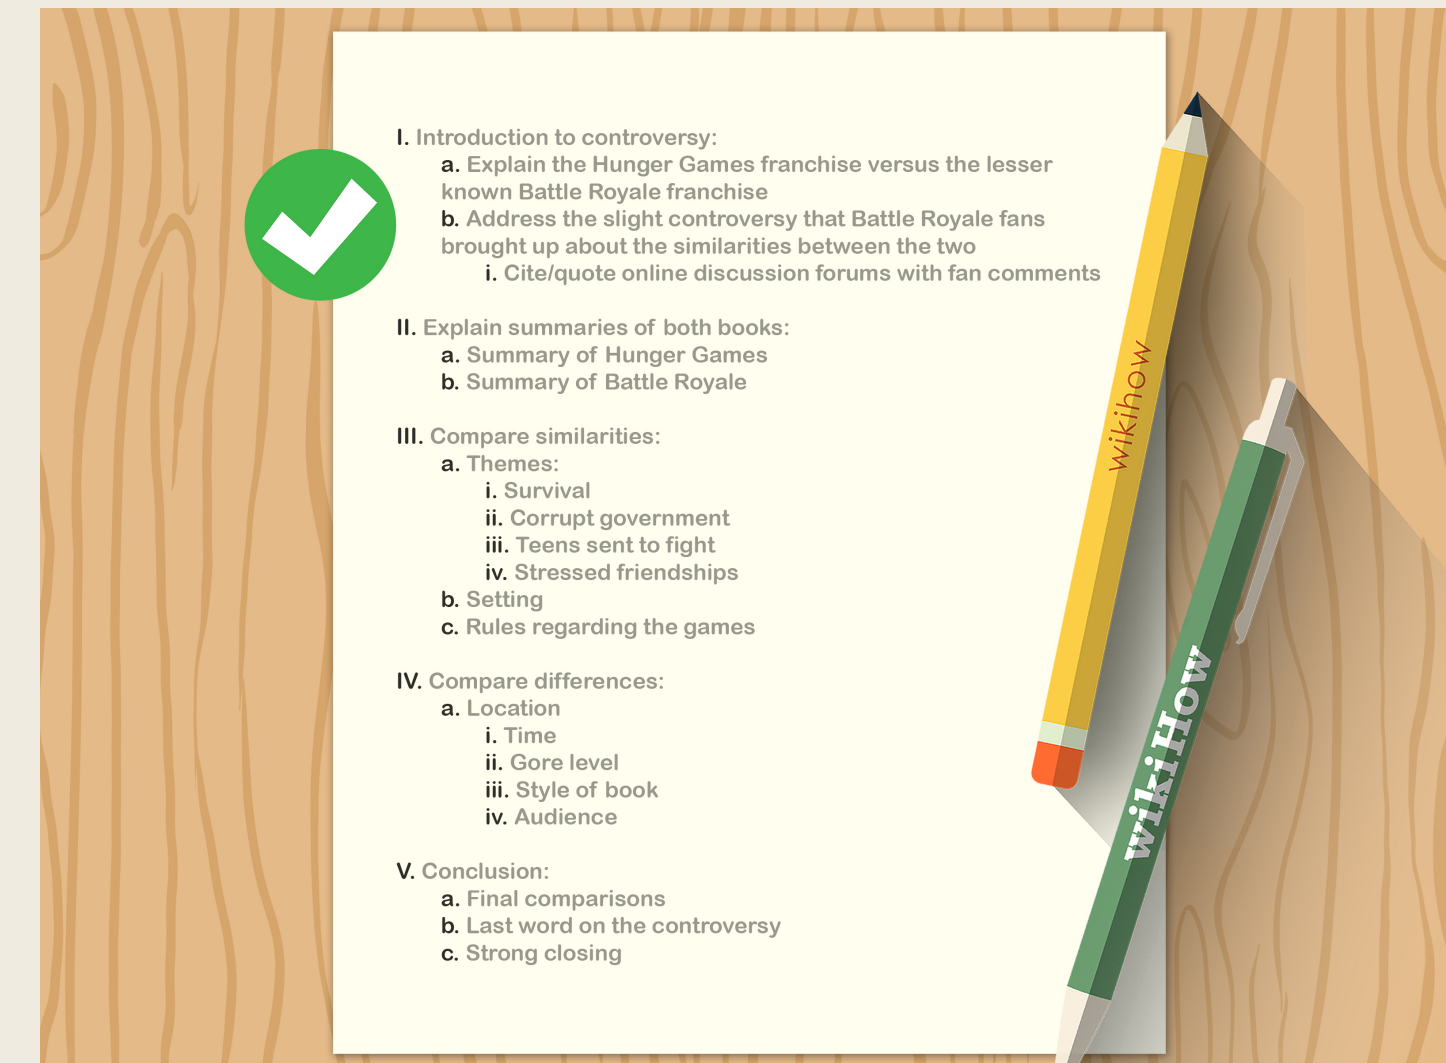

Settle on the purpose of the essay before you begin outlining or writing. In these types of essays, a good thesis statement is less about your personal point of view and more about pointing toward the information.

Compile information

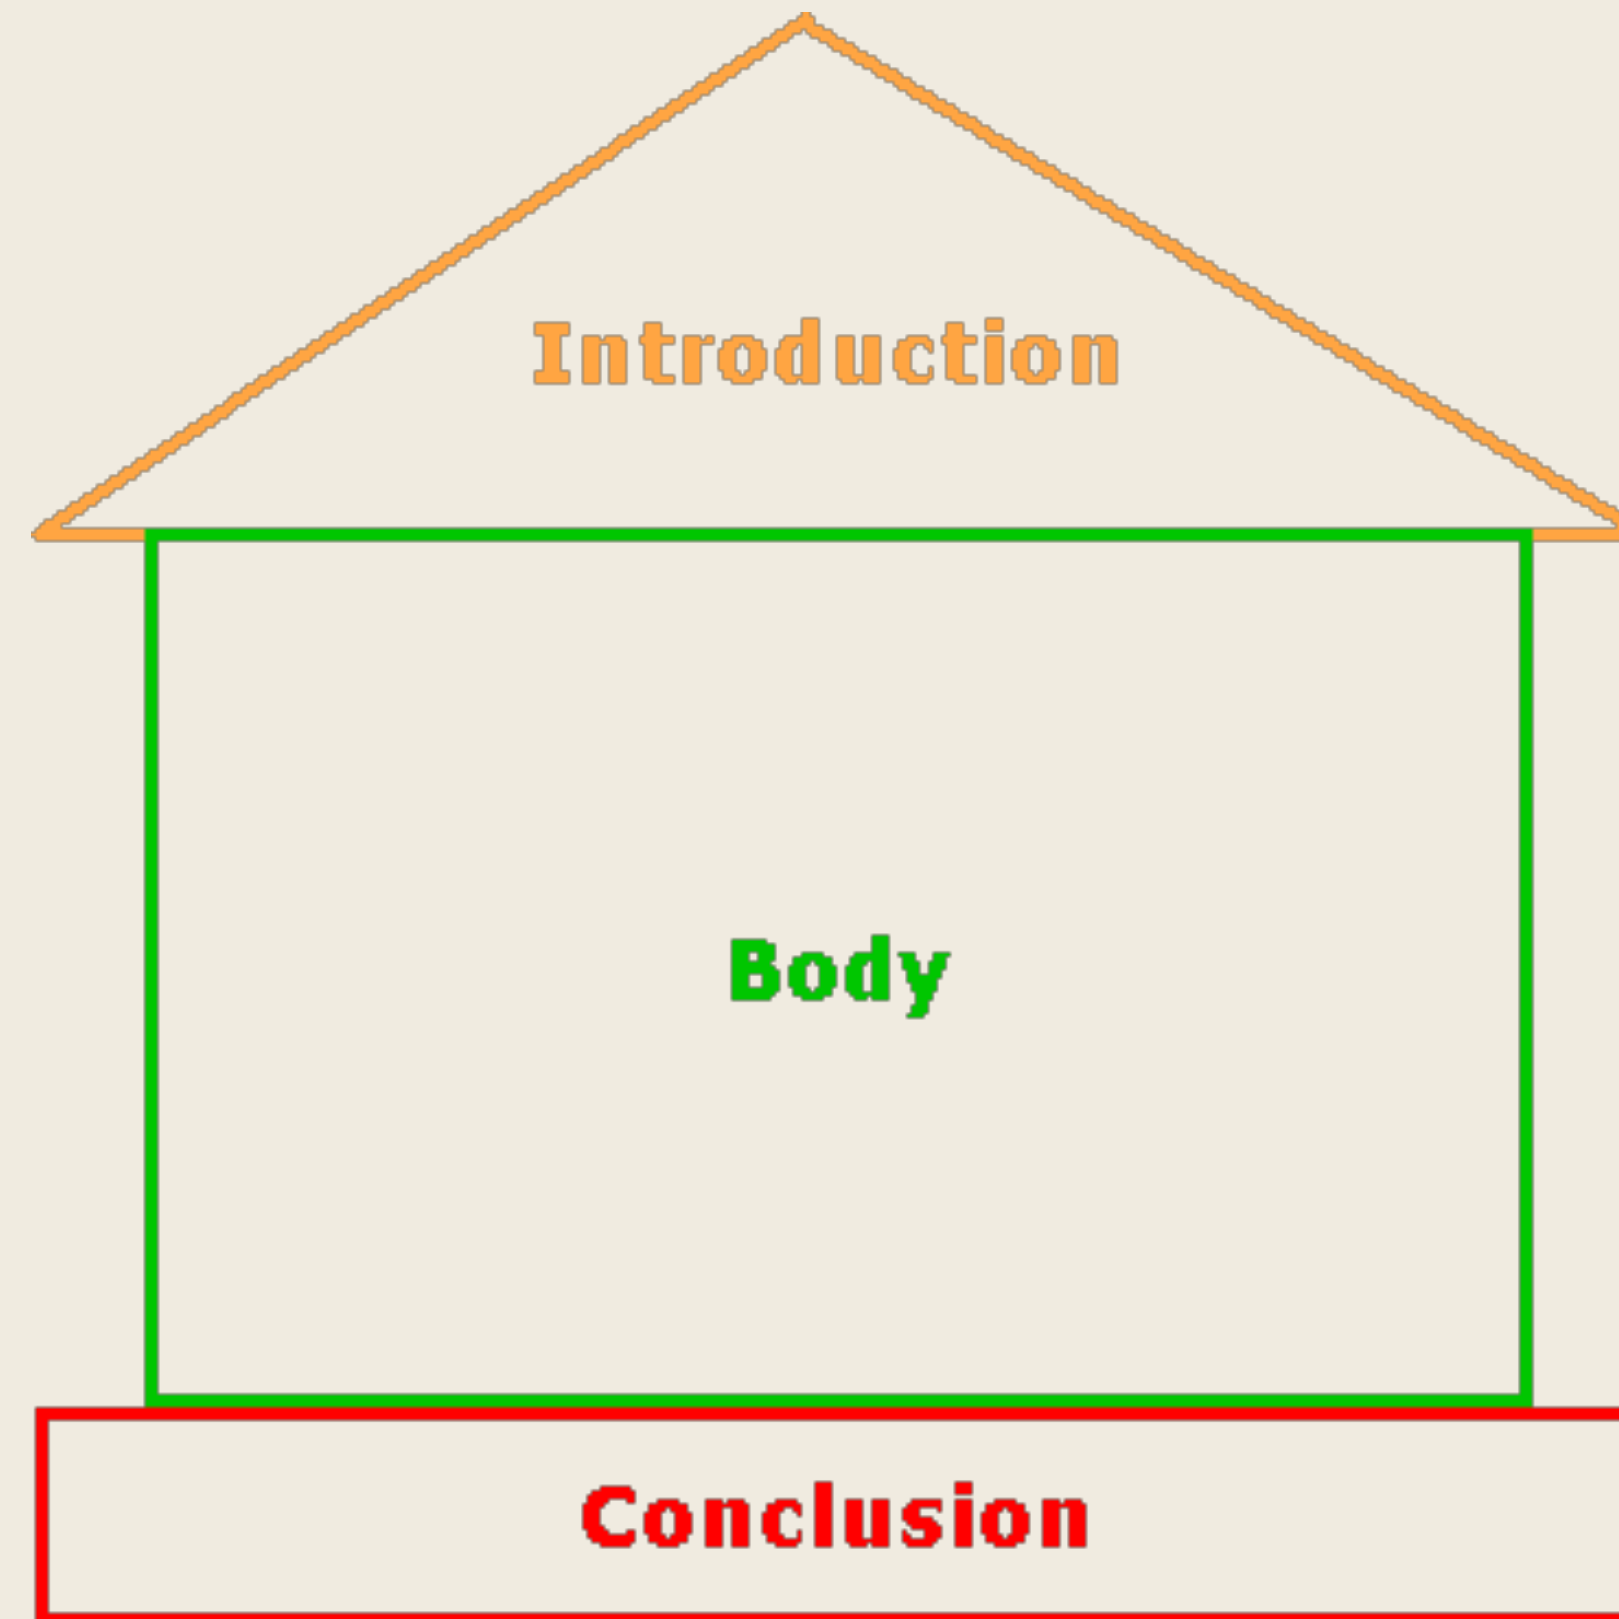

The best descriptive essays are full of detail—names, dates, physical characteristics, background information, and sensory information that can help implant your main points in your reader's mind. Collect these details, and then use note cards to group them into specific categories of information that you can pull up as needed.

Make an outline

Your descriptive writing must be organized. Group your main points into individual body paragraphs, each of which should be a subcategory of your essay's main topic.

Write an introductory paragraph

A good introductory paragraph can be a road map for your entire essay. Your thesis statement should come at the end of the introduction.

Write body paragraphs

Each body paragraph should begin with a topic sentence that anchors the reader's attention and tells them what to expect from the paragraph. Be as specific as possible without overwhelming your reader with information.

Summarize the essay in the concluding paragraph

Your conclusion is the button on the entire essay. Use it to reiterate the main ideas you established in the first paragraph, and touch back on key details from body paragraphs. Do not use this paragraph to introduce new ideas.

My hero is as great and kind as an angel. I am proud of being one of his followers. He is the prophet of Islam Muhammad (peace be upon him).

Prophet Muhammad is a great figure in the world, and one of the most influential people humanity has ever witnessed. His words and deeds greatly affected human thought and behavior throughout history. He was a religious teacher, a great father, a wonderful husband, a faithful friend, an excellent guide, a strong believer, social and political reformer, and the best companion.

I love him more than myself because of his special status in our religion.

Allah has honored him. All Muslims are grateful to him for his achievements. Muhammad (p.u.h) is a prophet sent from Allah to all humankind. He is the last prophet.

Muhammad was illiterate and most of people at that time were illiterate too. But he was famous for being truthful, trustworthy, confident, and generous. He used to help the poor by giving them charity; he used to play with children and make them happy and he was so honest and sincere to the extent that people called him the trustworthy.
